Discussion Questions

Ryan begins the conversation with a question about behaviors and scarcity mindsets that have manifested since the onset of COVID-19. What habits and behaviors have you noticed yourself exhibiting? Have your personal responses been helpful or harmful? What have you noticed from others?

In what ways have you been able to practice an anti-scarcity mindset by sharing with others during this time?

Many of the panelists shared openly about their internal struggle to be hyper-productive. Do you find yourself combating hyper-productivity? How so? For clergy: Have you been leading from a space of faithfulness or hyper-productivity?

Quincy suggested that while people have had opportunities to still be connected virtually, a sense of authentic engagement has been missing. What does authentic engagement look like, sound like, and feel like for you? How would you like to be seen and heard during this season?

In reference to the Exodus 16 story of manna and John 6 story of feeding the 5000, Ryan asks the panelists to explore how these narratives and others highlight the opposite of scarcity. In what ways have you experienced abundance? Have you been overlooking it?

Kimberly named "enough" as the opposite of scarcity. How would you define enough? Do you/we truly have enough?
